Tackling Modern Slavery

Last year the Modern Slavery Act became law, and set new reporting requirements for companies such as CRH and Tarmac.

A key part of the Act is the requirement to publish a modern slavery statement, which confirms the steps we are taking to ensure modern slavery and human trafficking does not occur in our organisation or our supply chain partners. This is a very important issue for Tarmac and our customers.

As part of CRH, Tarmac complies with Group policy on this issue. We have published a copy of the Group Modern Slavery statement to our website, which can be viewed in full here.

Tarmac is a responsible and ethical business and as part of our established procurement and HR processes we are committed to respecting human and labour rights and take all reasonable steps to ensure that modern slavery (in any form) does not take place. Over the last year we have held a number of workshops, discussions and training sessions with our supply chain partners and senior managers to reinforce these principles.
